

Adele Atkinson is a policy analyst within the OECD Financial Education and Consumer Protection Unit. She has specific responsibility for various aspects of the work undertaken by the OECD International Network on Financial Education, including the Financial Literacy Measurement Pilot and the Financial Education Programme Evaluation subgroup.

Adele has an honours degree in Economics and Accounting with Law, and a PhD in Financial Capability from the University of Bristol, UK. Prior to joining the OECD she was a Research Fellow at the Personal Finance Research Centre at the University of Bristol and an Associate Lecturer in Economics with the Open University. She has 11 years experience of conducting empirical research in the areas of personal finance, education and policy evaluation and has written or co-authored over 30 publications. She played a lead role in the analysis of the UK Baseline Survey of Financial Capability in 2005 and has since provided advice and guidance to various other countries, including Canada, Ireland, the Netherlands and the USA on the development of their own financial capability studies.
